Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Wednesday 06 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Mainly dry, bright and cold today.

Today:
It will be mainly dry with bright and sunny spells. A widespread frost slow to clear and the chance of mist and freezing fog patches. Rain moving into the Western Isles by dusk.

Tonight:
Rain and snow will gradually push south through the country. Ice will be a hazard on untreated surfaces with lying snow for some. Winds freshening around northern coasts.

Thursday:
Any rain and snow across southern Scotland will soon fizzle out with wintry showers mainly affecting the north and northeast. Bright and sunny spells developing. Remaining cold.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Scattered snow showers affecting the north on Friday, otherwise bright and cold. Patchy light rain pushing in from the west on Saturday, perhaps heavy across the Northern Isles on Sunday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.